FOOT-BALL DOPE

"Little Colonels" Lose Hard Fought Game to Henderson—Win From Dawson

Henderson defeated Marion at football last Saturday by the score of 7 to 0. When Marion loses a football game at home the spectators leave the park suffering from one of two general types of ailment. One type is the result of a miserable exhibition of football by the Blue and White which ends in an overwhelming victory for the enemy. This type is known by the technical name of "mal de punko". The other type of sickness is caused by a victory for the enemy in which the Blue and White fights every inch of the way—one that leaves no dark sepia-toned taste in the mouth but on the other hand a loss by such a small margin that the home folks can say that "with a better break of luck we would have won" (Portfolio of Alibis, Section XIII, Chapter XXIII). Those who suffered from defeat last Saturday were afflicted with this latter type of the malady.

The home folks will never witness a more evenly matched game of football than the one played last Saturday. Henderson came down early in the morning asking for only a sixty point win and was satisfied to go home Sunday with the game 7 to 0. In explaining the scarcity of scores on the Henderson side of the ledger the spokesman for that team stated that the Marion boys were so much "largah" and so much "swiftah" than the Henderson children. (Portfolio of Alibis, Section III, Chapter LXIV.)

A young gentleman by the name of Martin Brown enjoyed the game very well from the standpoint of a participant. He seemed to take great delight in carrying the old ball thru, around and over the Henderson line. The Henderson boys got tired of tackling him and after holding a conference proposed that he stop whenever one of them crossed their fingers. This failed to work however.

Marion's ends played a cautious game on the offensive. Each time when Marion punted they were seen to carefully search thru their personal effects to see if they still had their put and take tops with them and were therefore a little slow in getting down the field. Marion's backfield, thru an oversight, left their interference out in the rain the day before the game and as a result of this mishap, said interference was almost useless.

The lineup:

Henderson	r e	Marion
White	r e	Hicklin
Hartung	r t	Belt
Trempe	r g	Hurst

Columbus discovered America October 12, 1492. Marion defeated Dawson Springs at football 41 to 14 on October 12, 1921. What a coincidence!

It was a clear cold day with a choppy nor'wester rolling over the gridiron. The watch in the crowd's nest had reported ships flying the colors of Dawson early in the morning. It having been reported that a landing would be effected at one bell in the dog watch, several score of the natives gathered at Cooks Park to witness the solemn ceremony. At the conclusion of the girls basketball practice Capt. "Columbus" Allen made known his desire to land the foot ball game. The commander of the enemy accepted the challenge and the game was on.

The game was filled with flashes of the sublime and the ridiculous. The Blue and White launched a broadside against the flagship of the enemy and scored a perfect hit. At this moment a gob in the service of Dawson called it a day and handed in his resignation. He was replaced by the reserves and the fight was on. Marion rested a brief minute and then in the second quarter rushed over a pair of touchdowns and the score stood Marion 21, Dawson 0. To make sure that the score was right the natives counted them one at a time between halves. It was in this quarter that "Eppie" Belt carelessly placed his feet on one of the enemy. The Dawsonite, after congratulating himself on his endurance under heavy odds, called Eppie's attention to the sign that he carried on his back. The sign read: "Dont Tread on Me" Eppie offered sympathy to the poor wreck and the game was resumed after all hands had drunk from the old moss covered bucket that stood on the sidelines. Marion scored three more touchdowns in the second half. In the last quarter Marion went to pieces and enacted a few vaudeville skits for the benefit of those present who had a sense of humor—har! har! While Marion was putting over the latest hit of the season Dawson put over two touchdowns.

During most of the game Marion showed an almost unbeatable brand of football. Considering the fact that Marion has played four football games in the last twelve days occasional flashes of ossified strata must be overlooked. (Portfolio of Alibis Sec. CX, Chapter III.) The line held well and the ends showed better football than last Saturday's exhibition. Wilson's line plunging was phenomenal. Conyer and Dillard thrilled the crowd with some fancy open field running. Brown surpassed his performance of last Saturday on general all around work in the backfield.

A WEDDING

Mr. Ira T. Pierce of this place and Miss Jane S. Thompson of Georgetown, Ky., were married in Louisville October 5, by the Rev. F. F. Gibson, pastor of Walnut Street Baptist Church.

Miss Thompson is well known here, having taught in the Marion High School for two years. She is a cultured lady of many charming qualities and numbers her friends by her acquaintances.

Mr. Pierce, "Dude" is a Marion boy and a successful coal dealer of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierce arrived in Marion last week and began house-keeping on N. Walker Street.

The Press extends congratulations.

MARRIED

Mr. Burnie Crider and Miss Rubie Hill were united in marriage at the beautiful home of Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Oakley on East Belleville Street, on Saturday at 3:00 o'clock p. m.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Oakley. The Press and many friends extend congratulations.

FISCAL COURT MEETS

The Fiscal Court was in session two days of last week and transacted quite a lot of routine business. It fixed the salaries of the county officers for the coming four years and placed them the same as the last four years. They also endorsed the appropriation of $5,000 per mile to assist in the building of the Federal Highway from Union county line to the Livingston county line. There was a full attendance of the Magistrates and their last regular session.

WILBORN'S GROCERY ROBBED

On Monday night the Wilborn grocery was burglarized for the third time in three weeks. This time the thieves entered through a door on the east side, cutting out a panel of the door. Mr. Wilborn can't tell as to the amount of groceries taken.

This is beginning to get monotonous and it seems that steps ought to be taken to catch these thieves and put a stop to it.

Mr. and Mrs.

What wonderful thoughts come up when these two abbreviations are printed in a news item—what intense human interest these portray.

In the country weekly paper, they take the one big place in all items, from the simple visit to relatives, to the larger matters of human life.

"Mr. and Mrs."—the great news item of the universe, the bringer of recollections to the man far from home, who takes his old home town paper and reads the items of Mr. and Mrs. and lets his mind wander back to the days when he knew the Mr. and Mrs. in knee pants and shall we say, short skirts.

It's the home town paper where the real Mr. and Mrs. news item occurs—and to receive the home town paper week in and week out is to know the great happenings of the world, the doings of "Mr. and Mrs."

APPLE TREE BEARS SECOND TIME THIS YEAR

J. A. Ford of near this place brought to the Press office Monday morning an apple of the second crop the tree has borne this year. The apple had reached a fairly good size. Mr. Ford reports that the tree was as full of blooms the first of September as it was last spring and that many apples were formed but most of them fell off due to the hot dry spell. He states that the tree now has about two dozen apples on it.

Dr. Nunn also has a tree that is trying to bring in two crops this year. He recently brought some apple blossoms to town.

HAND INJURED

Robert Wilborn, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wilborn, of East Belleville Street, suffered a very painful injury to his left hand last Saturday evening. Robert was helping load stock at the shipping yard and while the men were pinching a car in place he ran his left hand under the wheel to remove a scotch, the men ran the car up on his hand. Three of his fingers were badly crushed and the middle finger had to be removed.

Dr. Clement was called and dressed the wound.

FACULTY PLAY

The faculty of Marion City Schools will present "All On Account of Polly" at the school auditorium on next Tuesday evening October 18. This is a three act comedy by Harry L. Newton, and one of that author's best plays.

The entire faculty takes part and with the exception of two pupils, no one else appears. They live up to the first announcement "an all-star cast" and from the time the butler appears in act one until the close of the play there is not a lagging moment. Thrills and comedy, love making and dramatic situations follow in rapid succession and the audience is held spell bound from start to finish.

This is the first school entertainment of the year and the first play in which the entire faculty has taken part. School loyalty alone should guarantee a large audience but the character of the play and the clever acting justifies an overflow of the limited capacity of the auditorium.

See ad in this paper for the cast and prices of admission.

A SWEET POTATO

Mr. James Claghorn brought to the Press on Fair day a half bushel of nice, smooth sweet potatoes. One of them weighed seven pounds and was on exhibit at the Fair.

We thank you Brother Claghorn. Come again.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our kind thanks to our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown us in the illness death and burial of our darling, Robbie. May God bless each and every one of you for your kind acts and tokens of love.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT ORR

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Rebout of De-koven brought the remains of their little daughter, Effie Lee, to Marion Tuesday and carried them to the Love Cemetery for burial.

Harvey Butler of Livingston county was arrested and brought before Police Court and fined for being drunk Monday.

GIRLS WIN EASY GAME FROM DAWSON

With an ease that was almost shameful the Marion High School girls' basketball team defeated the Dawson girls Wednesday afternoon by a score of 73 to 2. The Dawson team was in a class far below the speedy Marionites.

The Marion girls are the fastest and best coached team that ever represented the local school and their team work as showed in the Wednesday game would do credit to any team. Every play went like clock-work and the two forwards Moore and Doss missed very few goals.

To say the Dawson girls did not put up a good fight would be adding insult to injury, they were just outclassed. The Marion team next faces Clay on the 22nd and they are fondly looking forward to a victory.

Line up for Marion: Moore and Doss forward, Lowry center, Birchfield and Hughes guards. Substitution, Hard for Moore.

FREDONIA VALLEY STOCK SHOW

The Fredonia Valley Stock Show will be held at Fredonia October 22, one day only this year. As the Fredonia valley is one of the best farming sections in this part of the state and many up-to-date farmers live there.

Quite a number of herds of registered stock are raised in this valley and as preparations are being made there will be no doubt a great showing of stock.

Farm Bureau Notes

Crittenden County Fair

The Crittenden County Fair and baby Show was held at Cooks Park last Friday. The exhibits in dairy stock, beef stock, horses and mules, hogs and seed corn were good. Considering the length of time the Fair was advertised and the adverse weather conditions, the Fair went off in very good shape. It is to be regretted that in the poultry classes there were so few entries. The poultry of Crittenden county is good only in spots, in general it could be improved wonderfully.

The Baby Show aroused a great interest as it rightly should.

The Junior Agricultural Club pigs were objects of much interest by the younger farmers of the county. This Club work is to be greatly enlarged next year for it is a very important line of work.

Begin to make preparations now for a much larger and better Crittenden County Fair in 1922.

The premium winners who have not yet received their premiums may do so by seeing Mr. Franklin at the Bank.

Lack of space prevents the publishing of the complete list of premium winners this week. It will be published next week.

The County Agent has found considerable San Jose scale on orchard trees in various parts of the county. This scale insect makes the limbs look as if wood ashes had been thrown over the affected parts and usually the limb dies in a short time. In fact the drying of numerous limbs is usually the first thing noticed by the farmers. This disease will kill every tree in the orchard if neglected but may be controlled by prompt spraying. Notice the limb cut from a plum tree in T. H. Cochran's window it is badly infected with scale.

Mr. J. L. Clement in co-operation with the College of Agriculture, at Lexington, will conduct a wheat variety test demonstration on his farm. The four varieties to be tested are: Ashland, Kanned, Fulcaster and Cunnell's Prolific. The tests are to determine if these particular varieties are suited to Western Kentucky. Ashland wheat has given excellent results in other parts of Kentucky. Kanned is the famous Kansas wheat. The outcome of these tests will be published in due time.

The Farm Bureau met in regular monthly meeting on County Court day. Routine matters of business were discussed and among other things the great need of more members. The Farm Bureau is doing a great work in the state of Kentucky and in order to keep on its full measure of service more members are needed to support the organization.

Many farmers are making plans to follow helpful reading along farming lines during the coming winter months. During the past few months more than 5000 farmers of the state have written to the Experiment Station asking to have their names placed on the mailing list to receive the free agricultural bulletins. Poultry and live stock feeding and poultry husbandry are the most popular subjects with the farmers who have already had their names placed on the lists.

How about your winter reading? Why not write the Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky., and ask for information on the agricultural subject you are most interested in.

County Agent Childress of Marion County, reports that there are only about five remaining scrub sires in that district. There are more than 80 purebred sires in the county at the present time and plans are being made to increase this number by replacing the remaining scrubs. If the same could be said of Crittenden county what an improvement it would be.

AN EDUCATIONAL AUTOCRACY

The State Department of Education in promoting its campaign for the adoption of the two school amendments is having published in the Louisville newspapers a series of interviews with school heads throughout the State, a very large percentage of whom declare themselves in favor of the amendments.

The persistency with which these interviews are being printed leads to the conclusion that the Department regards this species of propaganda as a very impressive argument for the adoption of the amendments.

A basic principle of the Department seems to have overlooked entirely is that the schools exist for the benefit of the children, and not for the benefit of the teachers and the superintendents. School laws should be framed and administered in the interest of the children who attend the schools and the taxpayers who support the schools, rather than in the interest of the teachers and superintendents, who are the beneficiaries of the taxpayers' money.

Moreover, the administration of any law should not be left to the element in our population most directly affected by that administration. If this were permitted, selfish considerations would invariably defeat justice. If our banking laws were framed and administered by the bankers alone we might depend upon it that they would be in the interest of the banks and not the people. If the manufacturers framed the tariff laws, manufacturers' interests would be given prime consideration. The same principle is true of any profession or in any line of business. Lopsided justice would be the result.

We do not mean to go to the other extreme. Bankers should be consulted on laws affecting financial matters; manufacturers on tariff schedules; railroad officials and labor leaders when workmen's laws are being enacted; but their influence should be only of an advisory character. No special class should be allowed to dictate the legislation under which it operates. There should be a variety of counsel, providing a system of checks and balances, which is the best insurance against special favors, and the best guaranty of wise and just laws.

During the present campaign in Kentucky, it seems that this principle is being disregarded. An educational autocracy is being set up in the State to jam down the people's throats two constitutional amendments for which there is no general public sentiment whatever.

There is a callous indifference to the fact that the schools are sustained by the taxpayers for the benefit of the children, and not for the teachers. One would think from the long and imposing list of interviews published daily that the schools in Kentucky were the private property and concern of the teachers, who are their beneficiaries, instead of the people who are supporting them.

We regret that an ambitious State Superintendent at Frankfort, in building up an educational machine, has fostered such an idea. In the name of educational progress, he has done the cause of education in Kentucky an incalculable injury. He has placed upon the great interest of which he is the head the stamp of autocracy, which the people are sure to resent.

By his unreasonable demands and the character of campaign that has been conducted, he has put the schools of Kentucky in a position where they may fail in the future to get their just deserts at the people's hands.

The popular resentment that has been aroused against an unworthy school program in Kentucky may easily sweep on until it gathers in its opposition a resentment against every worthy school cause.

It is time, in the interest of a cause greater than any man or every man now connected with it in Kentucky, for Mr. Colvin and his enthusiastic zealots to call a halt in their campaign. There is no chance for them to carry their amendments, and in pursuing a blind hope, they may do great injury to an interest which is indispensable to the State's progress, and in which thousands of Kentuckians, who are not and will never be the beneficiaries of school laws, feel a vital concern.—Elizabethtown (Ky.) News.

An infusion of thoroughbred blood enriches every other strain and gives quality, speed and courage to the colder breeds. Hundreds of thousands of acres are devoted to the raising of thoroughbreds in this State, and millions of dollars are invested in the industry.

At the coming session of the Legislature an organized effort will be made to destroy the thoroughbred interest, lay waste the fertile pastures, now valued at from $500 to $1,000 an acre, upon which they graze and reduce the peerless Man O'War, for whom $500,000 has been refused, to the worth of a plow horse.

Under the old bookmaking system which Mr. Bruce sought to perpetuate for his clients, the State did not receive a dollar; under the present law the Kentucky Jockey Club pays yearly into the State Treasury over $300,000. If Mr. Bruce succeeds in destroying the thoroughbred interest this immense sum will be entirely lost to the State and the book-makers will return to prey on the public.

The leader of this destructive crusade, falsely put forth as a moral issue, is Helm Bruce, a Louisville lawyer, who, nursing a personal grievance, and in grateful remembrance of his former race track clients, Cella, Tilles and Adler, the St. Louis bucket shop gamblers, seeks to prohibit all racing in Kentucky. When the Racing Commission was created by an act of the Legislature and the turf in this State was taken out of the hands of the book-makers who had dishonored a royal sport, Helm Bruce, took a fee from this syndicate of bucket shop owners and sought to have the law declared unconstitutional. He was defeated in his selfish purpose and now that the scandal breeding book-maker has been driven out, and the turf is prospering under the pari-mutuel system, with the leading horsemen of Kentucky, selected by the Governor, giving their time to the enforcement of the law, Mr. Bruce seeks to destroy the entire turf structure and carry with it the whole thoroughbred interests of Kentucky.

DeSha Breckenridge, editor of the Lexington Herald, has defended racing, as now conducted under the State Commission, and in a series of frank and forceful editorials he has exposed the inconsistency of Helm Bruce, once an attorney for the book-makers, and now advocating the destruction of the pari-mutuels which would open the way for the return of Mr. Bruce's former clients to Kentucky.

Mr. Bruce pleads ignorance of the character of his clients or their selfish interest in the following statement to Mr. Breckenridge:

"A number of statements are made as to my knowing that certain alleged conditions, in connection with racing, formerly existed, such as that race tracks were controlled by bookmakers, and that bookmakers retained twenty to thirty per cent, and that all sorts of rascalties were committed under this system. The fact is I know none of these things. It is said that I know that Cella, Tilles, and Adler, of St. Louis, owned Latonia and Douglas Park, and it is said they ran bucket shops and race tracks in various sections of the country. I recall that Cella had an interest in the Douglas Park Jockey Club, whether or not the other persons mentioned had any interest in it or not, I do not know; and whether or not they ran bucket shops in other parts of the country, I do not know. It is said that I know these things because I was an attorney in a suit instituted against the State Racing Commission seeking to have the act creating that Commission declared unconstitutional. It is entirely true that I was an attorney for the Douglas Park Jockey Club in a suit brought to test the constitutionality of that act, but it is not at all true that I learned in that case, or otherwise, any of the facts stated in the editorial as to gambling conditions on the race tracks."

Mr. Breckenridge makes the following reply:

"Mr. Bruce knew that Cella, Tilles and Adler, who ran bucketshops and race tracks in various sections of the country, controlled Latonia and Douglas Park; that there was a syndicate book on all the tracks controlled by them; that racing in Kentucky was in a deplorable condition; that the meetings were long, and under the syndicate system of bookmaking every sort of rascality was committed.

Mr. Bruce states: 'I knew none of these things.'

"We avow that all statements made by us are true; that all intelligent men connected with racing or interested in racing know them to be true; that the facts were published in the daily newspapers, and that in the discussion in regard to the enactment of the bill creating the State Racing Commission were alleged and not denied. But we accept at its face value Mr. Bruce's statement: 'I know none of these things.'

"Mr. Bruce does recall that Cella had an interest in the Douglas Park Jockey Club. It is interesting to know that this much of what was general knowledge percolated through the atmosphere of sweet innocence that surrounded Mr. Bruce. If he had then had the slightest interest in the preservation of racing, either as a sport or as an aid to the breeding of horses or as a destructive agency of all that is good and noble, it seems to our mundane intelligence he would have informed himself as to the controlling factors in racing and certainly as to the personnel of his clients.

It has been a long time since the State Racing Commission was created and the effort made by the owners of Douglas Park and Latonia—Cella, Tilles and Adler—to have that act declared unconstitutional. Mr. Bruce makes a very plausible statement of the basis of that suit but a statement that in our opinion is entirely misleading.

power, which was never done before its creation.

Mr. Bruce may not know it, but we believe it to be a fact that the chief reason his known client, Cella and his actual clients, Cella's associates, wanted the act declared unconstitutional was that it made possible the destruction of their syndicate book.

We do not say that Mr. Bruce knows it, because after his statement we fear to state that he knows even the most widely known fact, but according to the grand jury of Jefferson County it is a fact "that a vast number of handbooks are being operated in the city of Louisville."

We have not heard of any movement by Mr. Bruce to stop these handbooks. If Mr. Bruce had succeeded in the suit to declare unconstitutional the act creating the State Racing Commission there would be books on the race tracks as well as handbooks in the city. The law now prohibits handbooks in the city. But they exist in the city of Louisville. Yet Mr. Bruce starts a campaign against "legalized betting" and so far as we know takes no action against the illegal betting that is, in our opinion, infinitely the greater evil, which is rampant in his own home town.

In the communication published this morning, Mr. Bruce says:

"I have never pretended to make any accurate statement of what are the total profits of the Jockey Club, because I do not know them."

In a statement by him sent through the Associated Press from Louisville September 17, he says:

"A legalized giant monopoly enjoying the gambling privileges realizes a profit of two or three million of dollars a year out of this demoralizing vice."

Again we apologize for having stated in a previous editorial that Mr. Bruce knows this statement is inaccurate. But we avow that it is inaccurate and utterly misleading and known to be inaccurate by every man and woman who has even cursory information in regard to the purses and stakes given by the Jockey Club, the expenses incident to the conduct of racing and the taxes paid by the Jockey Club.

Mr. Bruce closes his communication with this statement:

"Pari-mutuel betting on the race tracks may be a safer form of betting than bookmaking—safer for the gambler—but I am not interested in protecting the gambler."

Who is it Mr. Bruce is interested in protecting? As a lawyer he was interested in forwarding the interests of Cella, Tilles and Adler, who, though of course he never knew it, conducted bucketshops and syndicate books. The present movement, fostered by him will insure to the benefit of the bookmaker and handbook men, though equally of course he does not know this. As proven by the result in New York, the success of the movement he advocates will lead to a form of gambling that is most pernicious and as a rule crooked.

As revealed by the report of the grand jury in Louisville, the handbooks flourish even in the rarified atmosphere that surrounds Mr. Bruce.

Not interested in protecting the gambler? Of course not. Not interested in the personnel of his clients who employed his services to destroy the State Racing Commission so that they might run race tracks in Kentucky as they ran them in Missouri—solely for the benefit of the syndicate book? Not interested in protecting the breeding interests? What is Mr. Bruce's real interest?

His letter reveals, according to his own statements, that Mr. Bruce has never been interested enough to ascertain even the most widely known facts in regard to racing and that he knows no more about it now than he knew when he was the attorney for Douglas Park and the bucket-shop bookmaking aggregation that owned it.

Why is Mr. Bruce giving his time and his high ability and great reputation and his money to this fight to have repealed the provision in the Kentucky statutes that was passed April 8th, 1893, years before he appeared as the attorney for the Douglas Park Jockey Club? He did not then attempt to have that section of the statutes repealed. The act creating the State Racing Commission was passed in 1906. The provision under which pari-mutuels are permitted was passed in 1903, thirteen years before that. During those years the bookmakers operated as un molested on the race tracks as they now operate in Louisville and will again operate on the race tracks if Mr. Bruce succeeds in his present effort.

Every man familiar with racing knows that racing has been cleaner and on a higher plane; that the stakes and purses are four or five hundred per cent greater since the bookmakers were driven from the tracks. But Mr. Bruce "is not interested in protecting the gamblers" nor the horsemen nor the breeders nor the financial interests of the State, nor is driving out the handbooks in Louisville.

But Mr. Bruce "is not interested in protecting the gamblers" nor the horsemen nor the breeders nor the financial interests of the State, nor is driving out the handbooks in Louisville.

Under that provision the State Racing Commission has the power to prohibit bookmaking on its tracks and it has exercised and enforced that

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Young Carlyle Wilburton Dale, or "Bill Dale," as he elects to be known, son of a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idleness and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clavering, at the altar—determined to make his own way in life. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountaineer girl. "Babe" Heck, a character of the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his "clan," which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlyle. Moreland's description of "Carlyle" causes Dale to believe the man was his father.

CHAPTER II.—Dale arranges to make his home with the Moreland family, for whom he entertains a deep respect.

"The mountain you had to come over to come here, Mr. Dale," Moreland began, his big voice filled with an old, old sorrow, "is known as David Moreland's mountain mostly because David Moreland is buried in the very highest place on top of it, him and his wife. He was my brother, and was the best brother a man ever had. It was allus the talk o' the neighborhood how much we liked each other. Up onto the time he was married I went with him whar he went, and he went with me whar I went. I'd fight fo' him, and he'd fight fo' me. It's hard to tell, even after this long time....

"David, he was a strappin' big man, like all o' the Morelands. He was about yore size, and grey-eyed like you, and he had brown hair like you. When you walked up to the gate, it made me think o' him the day he was married; he was all dressed up in dark blue like you.... Then David he went up here one summer and found this vein o' coal. He got lawf'ul p'session o' the mountain, and moved his wife up here. The rest of us lived over in the Laurel Fork country then.

"One day I got a letter from David, which said that a man named John K. Carlyle was a-goin' to buy his mountain and the coal, and said that his wife was pow'ful sick. A week later she died, and left a baby which died, too, accordin' to a old Injun by the name o' Cherokee Joe, who knowed my pap and knowed David. And a month later we was all dragged from our beds by this same Cherokee Joe, tellin' us that Carlyle had shot David. Carlyle, Cherokee Joe said, was a-drinkin' hard. The Injun seed the shootin' through a window.

"It was night 'nigh to three days later when we got here and found pore David a-layin' whar he'd fell. We scoured the mountains fo' miles and miles around in a s'arch fo' the dawg who killed him, but we never found him.... The land up here looked purty, and it belonged to us by David's death; so we all moved up here to live, and built us cabins.

"Major Bradley found out about the end o' my brother, and he wanted us to put the case in the hands o' the law. But we wouldn't do it. A Moreland never goes to law about anything. He pays his own debts, and he collects what is his due....

John Moreland arose and paced the porch floor, which creaked under his weight. He stopped before Dale, and went on sadly:

"Now ye'll know why I was so much tore up when I heered yore name, the Carlyle part. John K. Carlyle killed the best man 'at ever lived. And mebbe ye'll understand why we ain't never had the conscience to sell the coal which cost Brother David his life....

Moreland's guest sat staring about at toward a brown-winged bat, which that industriously sipping honey from the heart of a honeysuckle bloom. He gave no sign that he had heard anything out of the ordinary, but in an odd, persistent way his mind seemed to connect his father, John K. Dale, with the story he had just heard.

John K. Dale had come originally from West Virginia, and he had flatly refused, time upon time, to make any investigation of the Moreland coal property.

The hillman interrupted young Dale's thinking:

"Addie, she's a-goin' to have dinner ready purty soon. Would ye like to wash, Mr. Dale?"

"Yes," was the answer, and in the tones of Bill Dale's quiet voice there was a shade of meaning that Moreland did not catch. "Yes, I'd like to wash."

CHAPTER II

In the Cup.

Dale found the humble home of his mountaineer host a home in the fullest sense of the word.

At the noonday meal, he met Mrs. Moreland and the sons of the household, and they were exactly as he had pictured them. Mrs. Moreland was quiet, motherly, always smiling, as straight and real as her husband. The sons, Caleb and Luke, were as much alike as the fingers on your hands; they were tall and broad-shouldered, grey-eyed and brown-haired.

Before sundown Dale had become acquainted with the rest of the Morelands, and he liked them, every one. He was at the cabin of his host's gray old father and mother for a long time.

When supper was over John Moreland lighted the big glass lamp in the best room, and the family and their guest gathered there to spend the evening. Then the lanky moonshiner and his mother came in.

Granny Heck had the sharp features and the stooped, thin figure of a witch. She wore a faded blue bandana about her white head, and she carried a long hickory staff; there was a reed-stemmed clay pipe in her mouth, and her dark calico skirt had a tobacco pocket in it.

Her son preceded her into the room. He walked to the center table, faced about, and said with a low and airy sweep of his right hand:

"Bill, old boy, this here's maw. Maw, she tells fortunes."

"So this here," creaked Granny Heck, looking over the brass rims of her spectacles, "is Mr. Bill! Well, well! I jest thought to myself 'at I'd come up and see ye, Mr. Bill, and tell yore fortune."

She dropped into the rocker that Caleb had placed for her.

"Addie," she said to the smiling Mrs. Moreland, "will ye bring me a cup half full o' coffee grounds?"

When the cup came, the fortune-teller took it and shook it and patted it, all the while muttering mysterious words that she had learned from the old Indian, Cherokee Joe—which served her purpose very well.

"I see," she mumbled more or less sepulchrally, "a pow'ful good-lookin' gyurl in a caliker dress, with her hair a-hangin' away down her back. A bare-footed gyurl, with big, purty eyes. She's a-standin' on a low cliff, a-peepin' at you through the laurels, Mr. Bill. This is in the past....

"In the future," she went on slowly, "I see this here as plain as daylight through a knothole, a awful big man, with curly black hair and curly black beard, and with eyes like a cliff-hawk's; and I see you, too, Mr. Bill; and I see a fight, a master fight—Lord! 'a' mussy, what a fight! But you'll marry the gyurl after all, Mr. Bill."

Dale laughed. The old woman had described Babe Littleford. But who was the "big, dark man"? Some fellow who had lost his heart to the mountain girl, perhaps.

When the Hecks had gone, John Moreland leaned forward and touched his guest on the knee.

"That thar big man mentioned in tellin' yore fortune," he said, "might 'a' been Black Adam Ball. Black Adam, he lives with his pap and mother a few mile up the river. As big as a skinned hoss, he is, and plumb on-golly strong. He's been a-beggin' Babe Littleford to marry him fo' a year or two, and she won't listen to him.

"Ef ever ye do haf to fight Black Adam," John Moreland went on, "ye want to fight him with a two-eyed shotgun and buckshot. He's the meanest man on earth; snake-broth and pizen vine is religious axide o' him. But ontel ye begin a-makin' love to Babe Littleford, I reckon the ain't no danger o' you a-havin' trouble with Black Adam; and you ain't likely, I take it, to make love to Babe."

"But Babe's the best one o' the Littlefords," declared Luke.

John Moreland reached for the leatherbound old family Bible. He opened the Book at random.

"It's about time we was a-goin' to our rest, and we'll go jest as soon as we've had prayers, Mr. Dale."

When half a chapter from St. Matthew had been laboriously but reverently read, the Morelands knelt at their chairs, and so did Bill Dale. John Moreland's bedtime prayer was very simple, and very earnest, and it had in it more of thanksgiving than of supplication. And a part of it certainly was uncommon—

"Bless the stranger with us here to-night, and all o' our kinfolks, and all o' our friends, and our inmates, the Littlefords—specially the Littlefords, Aymen!"

Dale was deeply impressed. He heard Mrs. Moreland dimly when she told him to let her know—she would hear him, if he called—if there wasn't enough cover for his bed. Then he found himself alone with the stairway of the Morelands.

He stepped forward and put his hand on the mountaineer's shoulder.

"How a man can go down on his knees and pray for his enemies," smiled Dale, "is entirely beyond me. Do you really mean it?"

"I try hard to," Moreland said quickly. "In a-doin' that," he went on, "I go Ben Littleford one better. Ben Littleford's the bell sheep o' the people who lives across the river from us. People we've hated fo' years and years. Ben, he holds family prayers, too, every night. He'd ax the blessin' o' the Lord on the stranger onder his roof, but not on his inmates, the Morelands. Yes, I try hard to mean it, Bill Dale."

"And that other enemy," murmured Dale—and he wondered why that should bother him so much, why he should feel that vague responsibility about it—"the man who killed your brother, David...."

"I don't never pray fo' him," interrupted the mountaineer, going a little pale. "I hain't that nigh Juffect. A man don't git so good 'at he axes the Almighty to bless the devil—or the ratter in the laurels, or the copper-head 'at waits onder a bush fo' the passin' o' some bare-legged child."

Dale winced, but Moreland didn't notice it. Dale let his hand fall from the other's shoulder. Moreland began to speak again:

WHY SUFFER SO?

Why suffer from a bad back, from sharp, shooting twinges, headaches, dizziness and distressing urinary ills? Marion people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Could you ask for stronger proof of merit? Ask your neighbor.

Mrs. Annie Gass, Rochester St., Marion, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been a household remedy with me for a long time and I am always glad to recommend them. At times I have suffered severely from awful pains across the small of my back. Severe pains shot from my hips to my head when I stooped over and I got so dizzy I could hardly see. When I have these attacks I get Doan's Kidney Pills from Orme's Drug store and they never fail to quickly relieve me of all the pains in my back. Other members of my family have also taken Doan's and have been greatly benefited by them."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gass had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. (Advertisement)
